Women's right and economic development

Monday 6 February 2017 | by CNG

Looking at the issue of population divorced from the human rights of women and sustainable development, Mrs. Stella Dolla, Chairperson, Board of Trustee of Women Organization for Gender Issues (WOGI), a non-governmental organization aimed at promoting women's rights and economic empowerment, laments that most women, especially those in the rural areas are not allowed to participate in the process that the point-by-risk event understand what their human rights are.

Dolla, who is the wife of Dr. Ernesto Afriya-Sir I Angeir, regrets that in a society where access to basic education for every citizen is non-existent, one can hardly make appreciable impact on advancing human rights of women. Hence, a greater majority of them lack the intellectual capability and training to play catalytic roles in this regard.

According to her, lax our society is characterized by socially induced environments and deprivations against women to the extent that advancing their rights will require a holistic approach that would first address institutionalized discrimination and misogyny, which is the root cause of inequality of women.

She explained that global sexual divide, now countries of the world have gone beyond the level where the issue is no longer liberating women from the shackles of institutionalized injustices, but one that seeks to bridge, with each passing day, the inequalities' gap between men and women.

According to her, discriminatory laws and practices that exist and the girls are left at home to do the chores, while their male counterparts are married off early thus retarding any meaningful growth that could have occurred in their life, while the boy is allowed to grow up 'before taking up a wife.'Discrimination occurs when women are prevented from fully participating in the political, economic, social and cultural life of their countries, on an equal basis to Human Leader' and perhaps, 'Welfare Officer' – the person in charge of food and entertainment.Discrimination occurs when women cannot inherit their father's property, for property is in asset with such asset you can borrow money for business, you can sell it and not for position.

Little wonder women are considered the poorest of the poor for lack of assets, We live,in a province in Nasarawa North,.Dolla noted,.solaces for ownership of immovable property is an important area from freedom from discrimination.

He doubt, the infringement of the rights of women retards economic growth and wellbeing.But the truth is that any society that marginalizes and infringes on the rights of almost half of its population,cannot make substantial progress in both its economy, political and social aspects,.Dolla concludes.
