MISSING PERSONS IN NEPAL

The right to know

Uncertainty about the fate of a relative is a harsh reality for countless families during an armed conflict or other situations of violence. Parents, siblings, spouses and children around the world are all desperately searching for their lost relatives. Not knowing whether their loved ones are alive or dead, families and communities are unable to put the violence of the past behind them. Their anguish continues years after peace has returned, and they are unable to move on to rehabilitation and reconciliation, either as individuals or as communities. These wounds harm the very fabric of society and undermine relationships between groups, sometimes decades after a conflict has ended.

The 10-year conflict in Nepal between 1996 and 2006 brought tragedy for many families: thousands of people were killed during the conflict, and over one thousand families still have no information on the fate or whereabouts of their loved ones. International humanitarian law requires the authorities to take all feasible measures to account for persons who have gone missing, and to provide their families with all the information they may have on their fate and whereabouts. Under international humanitarian law, the authorities are obliged to do everything possible to provide families with answers that will end the agony of uncertainty so that they can begin mourning the loss of a beloved husband or wife, caring parents, or loving son or daughter.

Since 1999, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), supported by the Nepal Red Cross Society (NRCS), has been talking to the families of the missing across Nepal and asking the parties to the conflict to clarify the fate of those who went missing in connection with the conflict. Over the years, the ICRC collected more than 3400 reports of disappearances. While the fate and whereabouts of hundreds has been established, two years after the end of the conflict more than 1200 people remain unaccounted for. Many families in Nepal have therefore been denied the joyful reunion they were hoping for. Instead, they face the ongoing pain of not knowing if their loved one is alive or dead, healthy or sick, detained or free. Whatever their economic situation or their background, these families all have this in common: they all need to know what happened to their loved ones, they need an official acknowledgement of their situation and they require support to meet their most essential needs.

In February 2007, for the first time, the ICRC and the NRCS published a list of missing persons in Nepal, which contained 812 names. Following this, 33 families received an answer and have been able to move on with their lives; meanwhile many more came forward and asked the Red Cross to help them obtain information on the fate and whereabouts of their loved ones. The names of the 1227 persons listed on this present document were collected over many years during continued contacts between the ICRC, in cooperation with the NRCS, and distressed families trying to cope with their feelings of despair, anger and helplessness. Each name therefore represents the missing person, his or her family, the suffering of that family, the statements the families provided to the ICRC, and the ICRC's repeated representations to the authorities. This is not a comprehensive list of all those who went missing during the conflict; it contains only the names of the persons whose families have met representatives of the NRCS or the ICRC and who are seeking information on the fate and whereabouts of their loved ones.

The publication of the names of these 1227 persons has two main aims. First, it seeks public recognition for the families of the missing and acknowledgement of their suffering and needs. Secondly, the publication constitutes an appeal to the government of Nepal for clarification of the fate of those who went missing during the conflict and for the immediate needs of the families of the missing to be met.

Nepal's Comprehensive Peace Agreement and several subsequent agreements committed the authorities to setting up a Truth and Reconciliation Commission and a Commission of Enquiry on the Disappeared. These two commissions will help address the suffering of families whose relatives were victims of violations that took place during the conflict, such as extra judicial killings and enforced disappearances. In addition to supporting the creation of these commissions, the ICRC is urging the authorities to clarify the fate and whereabouts of all those who went missing as a result of the armed conflict and to grant them an official status. This status would allow their families to access government support programmes that address their specific needs, which provide psychological and material support, assistance in dealing with the specific legal problems they face (regarding inheritance and marriage, for instance), and access to judicial procedures in connection with the disappearances. Clarifying the fate and whereabouts of missing relatives and taking the above-mentioned measures regarding the status of the missing are both critical: they will allow the families to begin the process of mourning and reconciliation.

WHO ARE THE MISSING?

In Nepal, the ICRC defines a missing person as an individual who is unaccounted for as a result of the armed conflict in the country between 13 February 1996 and 21 November 2006, and whose family is still waiting for one or more of the following:

- a satisfactory answer from the authorities clarifying their fate;
- an acknowledgement of the disappearance from the government (in the form of a declaration of death, a death certificate or the granting of a special status);
- support from the government to receive reparations;
- if deceased, information on the location of human remains and the recovery thereof;
- legal redress.

A HIDDEN TRAGEDY

People have gone missing for as long as wars have been fought. The circumstances of disappearance vary: they may have been victims of executions and thrown into unmarked graves; they may have been taken off the street or from their homes and subsequently died in custody without their next-of-kin being informed; they may be civilians or fighters killed in combat whose remains were not identified or recovered. It is a tragedy for the person who disappears, but the members of their family are victims too: caught between hope and despair, not knowing if their loved one is dead or will one day return, they are unable to close this chapter of their lives and move on.

The ICRC's activities

Armed conflicts and other situations of violence often lead to the disappearance of hundreds, or even thousands, of people. The ICRC carries out a number of activities that address the issue of the missing. These include promoting the rules of international humanitarian law; lending support for the development of appropriate national legislation; assisting authorities in setting up mechanisms aimed at addressing the issue of missing persons; cooperating with the authorities and other agencies involved in order to ascertain the fate of the missing; tracing people who are unaccounted for; dealing with human remains; and supporting the families of the missing.

THE RIGHT TO KNOW

The right of families to know the fate of a relative is enshrined in international humanitarian law and human rights law and it must be respected. The legal obligations are laid down in the Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols, and in the new International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, which has not yet entered into force and has yet to be signed and ratified by Nepal. International law is clear on the matter: it is illegal to make people disappear, and the next-of-kin must be informed without delay about their captured, detained, wounded or deceased relatives. The challenge is to ensure that States adopt and implement these rules.

INTERNATIONAL ACTION

During the 30th International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva from 26 to 30 November 2007, the participants, among whom were the States party to the Geneva Conventions, adopted Resolution No. 3 entitled "Reaffirmation and implementation of international humanitarian law: preserving human life and dignity in armed conflict". This resolution reaffirms the prohibition of enforced disappearance and the right of all persons deprived of their liberty in relation to an armed conflict to enjoy the fundamental guarantees established by international humanitarian law. Thousands of lives depend on these provisions.

MANAGING HUMAN REMAINS

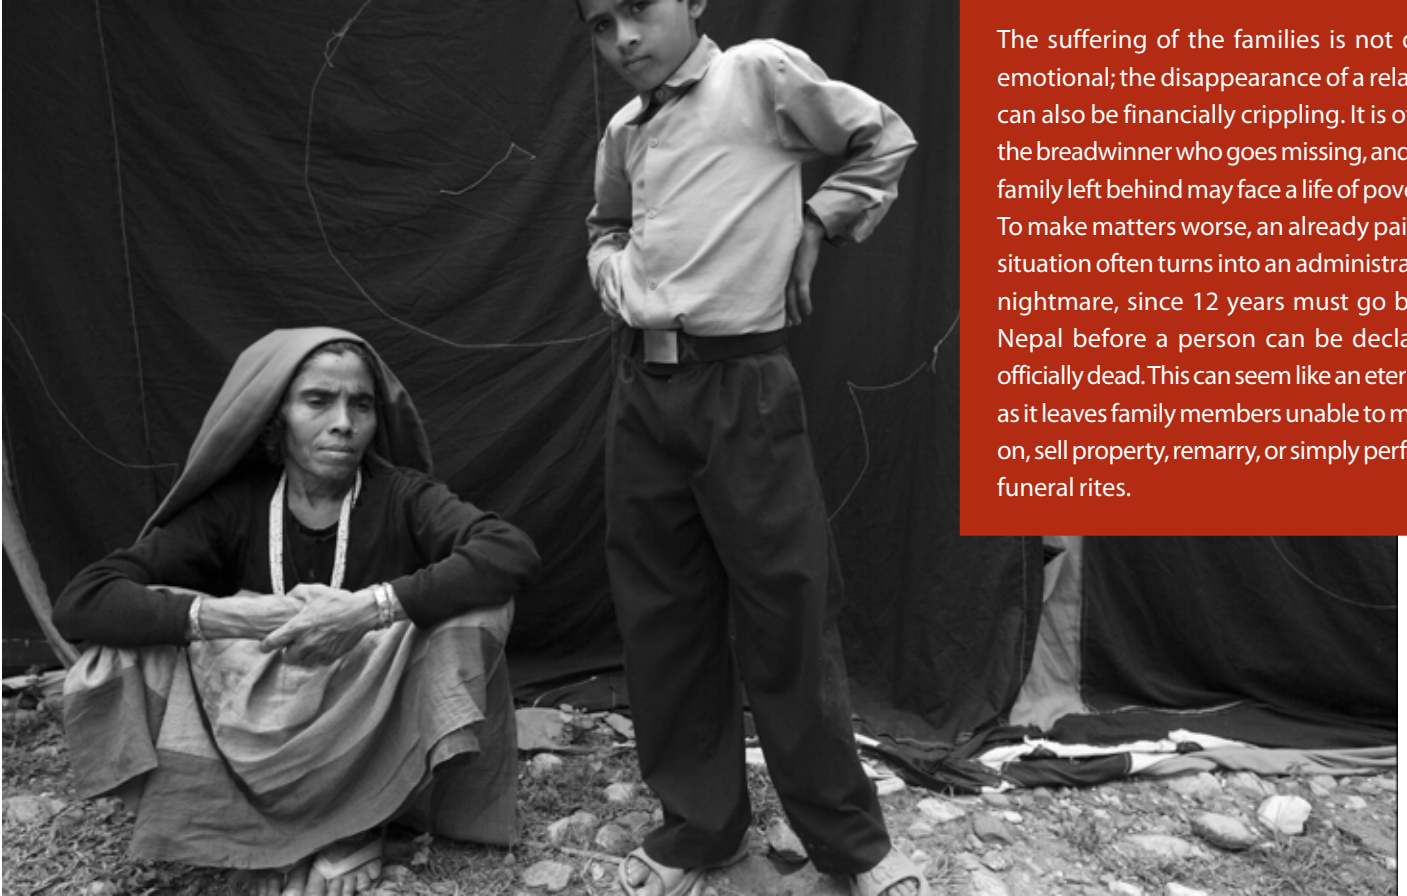

Failure to identify people who have died during armed conflict and other situations of violence significantly increases the number of persons classified as missing. Often, little or nothing is done to find, collect and deal with the remains of those killed in combat or in other circumstances. Human remains are often buried without being identified and graves are often unmarked. As a result, valuable information on the dead is lost or unavailable, and families either do not know that their missing relatives have died, or are aware of their death but do not know the location of their bodies or the circumstances of their death.

A NEVER-ENDING NIGHTMARE

The suffering of the families is not only emotional; the disappearance of a relative can also be financially crippling. It is often the breadwinner who goes missing, and the family left behind may face a life of poverty. To make matters worse, an already painful situation often turns into an administrative nightmare, since 12 years must go by in Nepal before a person can be declared officially dead. This can seem like an eternity, as it leaves family members unable to move on, sell property, remarry, or simply perform funeral rites.

THE MOURNING PROCESS

The only prerequisite for mourning is the belief that the person is dead. Until adequate proof of death can be provided, the relatives of a missing person cannot mourn and may experience feelings of guilt if they do attempt to begin the mourning process. The authorities issuing death certificates have a responsibility to ensure the authenticity of the information they contain.

FAMILY ASSOCIATIONS

Family networks or associations are groups of families who share the common fate of a missing family member. The ICRC and the NRCS encourage the creation of these associations, which aim to:

- " provide mutual support and help to meet socio-economic and psychological needs
- " empower families to be not just victims but also missing person activists
- " exert pressure on policymakers
- " raise awareness of their plight among a wider audience
- " ensure that the authorities do not neglect their duties towards missing persons

MISSION

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) is an impartial, neutral and independent organization whose exclusively humanitarian mission is to protect the lives and dignity of victims of war and internal violence and to provide them with assistance. It directs and coordinates the international relief activities conducted by the Movement in situations of conflict. It also endeavours to prevent suffering by promoting and strengthening humanitarian law and universal humanitarian principles. Established in 1863, the ICRC is at the origin of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement.
